

Executive Communication
Council

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATION COUNCIL

Defining, elevating and advancing the practice of exec comms.

Is membership right for you?

For leaders who believe communication makes a difference.

Some of our members:

These are the kinds of organizations that belong to the Executive Communication Council.

This is the only professional organization for exec comms professionals who believe in expressive, thoughtful leadership communication as both a strategic business advantage and a civic benefit.

ECC members inspire and support one another to seek out new thinking and provide thought leadership to the rest of the executive communication profession.

Member benefits:

Close, confidential, candid relationships. Regularly scheduled and also spontaneous communication with the world's most effective, committed, innovative executive communication professionals.

A seat at the table at the Annual Gathering held each spring. Candid. Intensive. Intimate.

Professional development support for you and your team. You and your people can attend any or every of the many ECC or Professional Speechwriters Association conferences, workshops, roundtables or webinars offered every year.

Access to a personal advisor and certified coach—seasoned, sensitive, steeped in leadership communication best practices and research. (Each membership includes three career coaching sessions for you or anyone on your team.)

Access to ExecCommReport.com, a dynamic website full of timely news, perspectives, best practices and resources for executive communication professionals.

Exclusive access (and influence on) ongoing Executive Communication Standard research. The ECC helps members establish norms and best practices in this still burgeoning corporate communication field.

An ongoing role in setting the Council's priorities to best address your executive communication needs and further your communications philosophy.

What our members are saying:

"What I love most about this network is having a safe place to talk shop about the hard stuff. The resources, the best practice sharing, the behind-the-scenes stories from peers – it all makes me sharper and more confident in my role."

"Being part of the ECC means joining a trusted circle of peers who are advancing leadership communication together."

"The opportunity to connect with the top professionals doing the specialized work of executive communications, in the ECC's confidential, collaborative environment, has been a game changer."

"The ECC is one of a kind. I value the access to smart, experienced peers who share a passion for communication, are always willing to pass along what they know and never fail to jump in when a member asks for help."

This is where to start:

Your commitment:

Corporate membership cost is $14,995 per year.

You're applying on behalf of your organization, and your membership benefits all your exec comms colleagues, and leaders you all serve.

Our commitment:

The ECC provides the networking, the knowledge, the resources and the research our members need to make maximum impact with executive communications.

Our mutual mission:

The ECC exists to meet three essential needs in a fast-evolving professional discipline:

1. Define

To define excellence in executive communication and share modern leadership communication philosophies and practices with the broader exec comms community.

2. Adapt

To thoughtfully and continuously adapt executive communication strategies and tactics to meet the ever-changing needs of organizations' leaders and their stakeholders.

3. Showcase

To showcase to the business community, and to society at large, what great leadership communication is and the profound impact it can make.

Take action now:

Visit the Executive Communication Council site

Email ECC Executive Director David Murray at david.murray@prorhetoric.com

EXECUTIVE
COMMUNICATION
COUNCIL